LEGAL AID IN CONTEXT OF SOCIAL JUSTICE AND HUMAN RIGHTS

Today, more than ever before, what is vitally important is to secure enforcement of human rights. There are millions of people who are denied human rights only because, they cannot afford the cost required for the enforcement of their rights. Merely to talk about human rights from an elitist platform is not sufficient. In order to do social justice to them and to make human rights meaningful, legal aid becomes essential. The Human Rights which cannot be enforced due to poverty are meaningless and worthless. A right to access to justice is sine-qua-non for social justice. The access to justice itself is one of the most basic human rights, and without it, the realization of many other human rights may become difficult. Indeed, the right to access to justice or Legal Aid is evolved by judicial creativity for the benevolence of poor persons. Now, neither is it possible nor is it proper to isolate the right to legal aid from range of human right. The reason is obvious, mere declaration and passing of resolutions about human rights are not enough, the guarantee for the enforcement of these rights is equally essential. Hence, it will not be incorrect to say that right to legal aid stands first in the specie of human rights. Human rights are only mere pious declaration without legal aid. They become lucrative only when they are enforced. The right to legal aid enables accomplishment of these human rights and make them worthwhile for the poor masses in the world.

In the present legal system of most of the countries justice is not given but sold. The consumers of justice have to pay remuneration of counsel, bear expenditure for court fees and also other contingent charges. Indeed, the poverty is an obstacle in the way of getting justice and due to this reason the poor becomes sufferer of social injustice. Legal aid is only a way for providing social justice to all. Legal aid indeed, is integral part of the human rights and it requires urgent considerations, otherwise there is an apprehension that someday the patience of poor persons may be exhausted and that will endanger the world peace.

“Nothing rankles more in the human heart than a brooding sense of injustice, illness we can put up with, but injustice makes us want to pull things down. When only the rich can enjoy the law, as a doubtful luxury, and the poor, who need it most, cannot have it because its expense puts it beyond their reach, the threat to the continued existence of free democracy is not imaginary but very real, because democracy's very life depends upon making the machinery of justice so effective that every citizen shall believe in and benefit by its impartiality and fairness.”
