Aishi's Exceptional Talent

Aishi's story begins not in a laboratory, but with scrap paper. Old newspapers became pencils. Simple ideas turned into sustainable solutions. Her work in natural farming and low-cost, electricity-free innovations reflects a belief that progress does not always need complexity, only intention. She started early, experimenting, failing, and trying again. When she says she wants to create solutions "useful for common people and friendly to nature," it doesn't sound like ambition. It sounds like instinct. She began her journey in Class 4 through an ISRO model-making competition and later received the INSPIRE MANAK State Award in 2022.
